The Next Confection OBSESSION?

If you have the good fortune to travel to France, you will no doubt see that above all there is one pastry that the French seem obsessed with: the macaron. Not to be confused with the standard coconut “macaroon” that we are used to here in the States, these little crunchy-on-the-outside-delightfully-chewy-on-the-inside bites of heaven come in all the colors of a pastel rainbow—and there is real culinary art involved in making them.

Christine Gold of Easton is the owner of Délices Européennes: Fine European Cookies. As a baker and traveler, Gold decided to combine her love of both with her background in business and a delicious niche bakery was born. Gold fills these almond meringue shell treats with a variety of delicious centers such as orange, mocha or rosewater buttercream and every cookie Gold bakes is meticulously hand-detailed, making each a one-of-a-kind creation.
